Under floor heating Leaks Repairs engineers

The topic of leaks can be dealt with very quickly. If you can see where the leak is coming from then that is where it is coming from.

In either case some excavation to a screeded floor will be required. If the floor is of a timber construction with underfloor heating, then the floor deck will need to be removed. No Heat from the Underfloor Heating System.

□ First of all start with the basics. Is there a hot water supply available? We have known cases where, on large properties, one boiler is supplying the underfloor heating while another supplies the domestic hot water.

Next, is there a demand for heating? Make sure that at least one thermostat is set above the current ambient temperature and that any timers or programmers are in an active mode. Depending on the control system used they may have been upset by a power cut and they may only be operating at night. Also check any fuses that are within your capabilities.

Circulating pumps for underfloor heating, or any heating system, can seize up if left unused all summer. Sometimes these can be freed by a sharp tap to the pump, or by removing an end cap on the pump and turning a slotted shaft. Once again we must stress that you should only do this if you feel competent to do so. Underfloor heating pumps are usually not of all summer, depending on the type of control system used, but we have known them seize in this way. If all else fails then you may need to look for an underfloor heating repair specialist, as many plumbers do not like working on underfloor heating system
